

Is your garden Peter Cottontail's favorite restaurant?

Forget the wire fence -- A brand new all-natural solution for extreme rabbit problems

(Brodheadsville, PA) March 25, 2009 – Is Peter Cottontail checking out the menu of your garden? Stop him and his hungry offspring before they devour every flower with new Liquid Fence® Dual Action Rabbit Repellent, a simple and safe way to protect your plants from damage caused by extreme rabbit problems.

Most rabbits can be repelled by scent alone, but others – particularly very young rabbits – are an especially persistent problem that has stymied homeowners, growers and landscaping professionals alike.

While fencing a garden can control rabbits, it's unsightly and ineffective, and you have to bury and bend the fence to guard against those rabbits who dig and climb to get to their next snack. Plus it's hard to enjoy your garden if you have to climb over electric fences, chicken wire or plastic netting. Rather than putting up a fence, why not spray to keep the rabbits away?

“Professional landscapers asked us for a no-holds-barred solution to intense rabbit problems,” said Edward Abraham, president of the fast-growing Liquid Fence Company. “We called it ‘mission possible’ and came up with this extremely effective formula.”

After extensive research and exhaustive testing, Liquid Fence created a repellent they guarantee to be tough enough to handle the worst, high-density rabbit population. Each application delivers a one-two punch to repel these animals with taste as well as scent without harm to humans, pets or vegetation.

This all-natural, long-lasting and rain-resistant formula dries without odor or residue. Only the rabbits will be repelled from your garden, while you can enjoy every inch of your hard work.

Easy-to-use for the home gardener, Dual Action Rabbit Repellent is effective enough for large commercial properties. Best of all, it is backed with a 100% money-back satisfaction guarantee.
